Through surveying practicing health care providers throughout the country and narrowing down their preferred screening questions to the top 3 questions through consumer focus groups, PSR has determined that an indirect approach builds more trust in the patient-provider relationship and demonstrates the most compassion, while being applicable to many different patient populations: “Who do you live with? Does he (she) treat you kindly? Does he hurt you in any way (either physically or emotionally)?” This 3-part question can lead to follow-up questions if the provider detects any hesitation or other cues to move forward.
