I mean, who wants to have vitamins or ANYTHING mailed to them all the time?? Never mind the inconvenience, but the COST I just know that in other countries vitamins are not the multi-million business that they are HERE in the States, at least I know they are not in EUROPE (a culture which I'm much more familiar with), if for no other reason than because, quite honestly, the Europeans have a much healthier outlook on food and diet and generally get all their vitamins via FOOD, which SHOULD be the way

Of 40 branded drugs covered by Medicare Part B and also available in England in the third quarter, 98% were more expensive in the U.S., according to the Journal’s analysis of data from Medicare and the NHS’s Business Services Authority. For instance, two syringes of Cimzia, an anti-inflammatory for rheumatoid arthritis and other diseases, cost England’s health-care system $1,117—less than half the $2,357 Medicare paid, the Journal found
