Put another way, assuming health care is a fundamental right, and that people accessing care are spread (more or less) evenly across all income brackets, it would be more effective for the health care system to target the higher earners to source its much needed income.

As an additional note, I find the proposition that Gaddafi was about to engage in a massacre of thousands of billions of people to be slightly implausible, even if it had not been revealed that the reliable media stooges have been distorting what Gaddafi had actually said about the opposition (he was referring to the armed rebels).
The US intervention in Libya, to take one recent example, appears to have involved a protracted debate within the Obama Administration between advocates of the cosmopolitan notion of "Responsibility to Protect" (R2P) and pragmatists opposed to the application of US military power in conflicts where there is no clear national interest.

What would Hahnemann say about our modern diet if he could see the supermarket shelves lined with cardboard boxes, most with wheat and thickeners added? How does food affect our ‘mode of living’ compared to 18th century life – it needed much less consideration then as most foods were in their simple form, yet it was still a strong focus for Hahnemann.
